

Artistic Portfolio

The background image shows a section of the Berlin Wall, which has been painted with various colors and graffiti. A person in a blue jacket is standing on a low wall, looking towards the left. Another person in a red jacket is crouching down on the right side. The wall is made of concrete blocks and has a rough, textured appearance. In the background, there are trees and buildings, suggesting an urban setting.

Sofiia Gadomska

01

hopnyk

02

structures of habit

03

shelter within

04

censored under concrete

05

reclaimed geometry

06

the concrete controversy

07 reinterpretation of Bickford Park

08

flower kiosk in Kyiv

09

what remains of home

hopnyk

Ukrainian aesthetics of the 1990s: dirty green walls and raw surfaces.

01

Medium: Oil pastels
Size: 55 × 71 cm
Project type: School project
Date: September 2025

The unconventional beauty of aggressive post-Soviet adolescents, dressed in Adidas tracksuits, drinking beer in the colorful yet depressive neighborhoods of Kyiv in the early 2010s. A representation of Ukraine seen through the lens of childhood.

This work was created under the inspiration of Danny Howes's painting "On the Stairwell," which I saw in London and ...

...the way bullies looked like in Kyiv and ...

...the view of my grandparent's floor, where I grew up.

structures of habit

This work depicts an Eastern European apartment block alongside traditional outdoor carpet-beating structures. It reflects an attention to subtle cultural and architectural details that shape everyday life in the region. Ordinary, often overlooked structures are presented as quiet markers of memory, routine, and place.

02

Medium: Watercolour, watercolour pencils, Gouache

Size: 30,5 × 22 cm

Project type: School project

Date: January 2026

One of the main challenges was showing the texture, so I had to do more studies and practice. Perspective was also difficult, so I watched YouTube videos to understand it better. I had some problems with smudging, and I solved this by waiting for the layers to dry.

Repetition was another challenge because I needed to keep similar parts consistent. The shape of the tires was not easy to draw correctly. I also worked hard to keep the composition balanced, even though it was asymmetrical. The tiny details were difficult because they needed a lot of time and careful attention.

This is simply an explanation of what these structures are for.

shelter within

I wanted to convey a sense of war through a strong emotional response. The red-toned paper evokes intensity and pressure, while the pose expresses sadness, isolation, and withdrawal. Through body language and composition, I aimed to present an emotional state that is both quiet and powerful.

03

Medium: Oil pastels

Size: 55 × 71 cm

Project type: School project

Date: June 2025

I wanted to explore the human body by creating a figure that is proportionate and anatomically credible, while using color to enrich the composition.

I chose a complex pose that is both visually engaging and technically demanding.

Particular attention was given to details such as the shift of muscles and the interaction of light with form, in order to give the figure a sense of life.

censored under concrete

Homage to the “Wall of Memory” — the sculpted bas-reliefs buried under concrete by Soviet authorities immediately after the work was completed. A reflection on how Soviet censorship and control destroyed art.

04

Medium: Fine liner and India ink

Size: 23 × 31 cm

Project type: School project

Date: October 2025

This work aims to express Ukrainian identity through architectural realism and symbolic meaning, while showing how the Soviet Union destroyed art. It addresses themes of loss and censorship and places particular emphasis on texture through tonal work.

reclaimed geometry

Inspired by Kazymyr Malevich, a Ukrainian artist often mistakenly identified as Russian, I explored geometric forms, color relationships, composition, and perspective.

05

Medium: Gouache
Size: 40 × 30 cm
Project type: School project
Date: November 2025

Working in this visual language felt like a way to reclaim history while exploring geometric forms, color relationships, and three-dimensional space. I used gouache for its matte, even finish and applied sharp contour techniques to achieve clear, graphic forms. The composition emphasizes balance, rhythm, and depth through contrasting viewpoints and the placement of color.

the concrete controversy

An uncompromising tribute to Brutalism in Kyiv, Ukraine, celebrating strength, controversy, and architectural courage.

06

Medium: Fine liner
Size: 30 × 26 cm
Project type: School project
Date: March 2025

This work explores Brutalism in Kyiv as a powerful and controversial form of architecture. It emphasizes the strength of concrete, monumentality, and the building's silent energy.

The objective is to guide the viewer's eye toward the structure and to reveal depth and volume. The work advocates for an architecture that is bold, self-assured, and uncompromising.

reinterpretation of Bickford Park

This project reimagines Bickford Park in Toronto as a space that fully acknowledges its role as a skate spot while strengthening its connection to the neighboring community centre. The goal is to transform an informal, improvised space into an inclusive public place, suitable for skating, social interaction, and everyday community life.

07

Medium: Colored pencils

Size: 40 × 30 cm

Project type: Design Discovery Program project,
University of Toronto

Date: July 2025

This project examines how spontaneous uses transform urban space. It aims to highlight an existing skate practice by giving it a legitimate place within the park's design. The objective is to create a functional, welcoming, and accessible space where movement, social interaction, and everyday life coexist. The intervention seeks to strengthen the open and collective character of public space.

flower kiosk in Kyiv

Exploring the unconditional beauty of small architectural forms in my neighborhood in Kyiv.

08

Medium: Clay and acrylic paint

Size: 17 × 17 × 19 cm

Project type: School project

Date: December 2025

For this project, I sculpted a miniature flower kiosk inspired by those commonly found in Kyiv—small structures deeply embedded in everyday urban life.

Through clay construction techniques and surface treatments, I focused on realism, materiality, and the quiet beauty of ordinary urban architecture.

what remains of home

Socialist-era residential architecture in Eastern Europe. My grandparents' apartment block used as reference. Cardboard structure, internal light source. The title reflects a longing for home and childhood.

Medium: Cardboard, Acrylic Paint
Size: 52 × 15,5 × 35 cm
Project type: School project
Date: January 2026

09

My artistic voice is rooted in architecture as a form of memory and emotional connection.

I am drawn to spaces that hold personal history, especially buildings that reflect larger cultural and social contexts, like the socialist-era residential architecture of Eastern Europe.

My goal was to create a piece that balances precision and craftsmanship with intimacy and storytelling, using model making as a way to preserve something meaningful.

By transforming my grandparents' house into a functional night light, I aimed to capture both the warmth of childhood memories and the quiet awareness that places change over time. Moving forward, I want my work to continue combining architectural forms with personal narrative, creating objects that feel both carefully constructed and emotionally alive.

